

Final Self Evaluation CS 460

David Lochridge

Work Components: Blog: Should be better
Team Contributions: Good

Process Components: Professionalism: Good
Quality: Good
Impact: Good

As before, I had difficulties with using my blog, and did not enact the plan proposed in the midsemester evaluation. This needed to improve, and is still a problem.

Conversely, though, I contributed considerably more to the project than my fair share, and feel that that impact and those contributions outweigh the blog performance somewhat. As noted in the midsemester evaluation response, I feel that I improved the quality of class commentary and participation as well, which was a noted problem area before.

Contributions and Achievements:

- Spoke in every class period possible (Nearly every one) and improved quality of comments somewhat
- Database design documents (Visible in the team turnin)
- Neither missed, nor was late to any client meetings.
- 117 out of the total 315 commits (37%) as viewable in the commit log and on github itself.
- Was present at a vast majority (90%+) of the coding, design, and presentation preparation meetings. On the two occasions I missed the coding meetings, I was very responsive and fixed encountered problems before the end of that day.
- Only missed a single day of class, and was never more than 2-3 minutes late, which happened once.
- Completed and updated an integral part of the application, visible through the site itself and the github history.
